Christian Pittman, a cadet with the Cabot High School Air Force Junior ROTC and director of staff, leads his platoon, AR-053, down Second Street during the Ward Christmas Parade on Dec. 15.

Clarence McDonald of Cabot rides on an old carousel-type horse with Beyond Boundaries, a nonprofit equine-assisted therapy program utilizing horses as a tool to help individuals with disabilities reach beyond their expected potential, during the Ward Christmas Parade.

Joe Harrod, left, pastor of Grace Community Church, walks beside the church's float with, from left, Addilyn Krenn, 8; Kinley Harrod, 8; and Therese Krenn, all of Austin, waving to the crowd.

Camdyn Duet, 5, of Cabot helps out Carl's Dance Co. with throwing candy to the crowd. She and numerous other girls rode on the float, while the older dance girls danced behind the float.

Shawnee Weatherley, Miss Arkansas High School America, waves to the crowd, pausing briefly to throw out candy to the children and wish everyone a merry Christmas.

Justin LaBreck, a trombonist with the Cabot High School Marching Band, decorates his instrument and his head with festive Christmas pieces, adding to the Christmas spirit that the whole band showcased during its last parade of the year, the Ward Christmas Parade.

Ally Smith, a percussionist with the Cabot High School Marching Band, was one of many students who adorned their instruments with Christmas decorations for the parade.

Isabella Baker, 5, of Cabot waits patiently with family and friends for the Ward Christmas Parade to reach her spot along Second Street.
